

Bachelor thesis “Psychological problems related to leaving one’s job“ considers negative impacts related to leaving one’s job, job loss, change of job status, change of status from employed to unemployed. The thesis theoretically summarizes existing problems in five chapters. It defines basic facts, informs about basic researches of unemployment impact on individual and family. The main part of the thesis describes psychological and psycho-sociological impact of unemployment. Its impact on physical and psychical health, family as well, which works as an important social support. The last part considers basic services one can utilize to improve the current situation. At the end is stated a casuistry showing a real example of married couple, when both of them lost their jobs.